RECONSIDER PLAN TO APPEAL TO TAF I

Until Department Answers Appeals for Raises.

Navy Yard machinists decided today of to take their petition for more pay President Taft until the Navy Desertment has returned an answer. Last ng the intention was to appeal to the President at once.

The Navy Department is proceeding with indifference as to whether the machinists wait or do not wait, and promises a reply to the request for higher wages "in two or three days."

The machinists calmed down somewhat today from their feeling of last what today from their feeling of last evening when, admittedly impatient at alleged delays by the avy Department, they voted to go to the President today with their petition, when was signed some days ago by 1,500 machinists.

The calming down is due in large measure to the efforts of President Johnson, of the International Association, who mays be feels that the calming down is the calming down in the who says he feels that the mahists will not receive public support trying to go over the head of As-tant Secretary Beekman Winthrop fore Wr. Winthrop himself has acted. Sparring For Time.

On the other hand the machinists in the shope still feel that the Navy De-partment has been apparently sparring partment has been apparently sparring for time and that the delay is exasperating. The machinists' officials viewpoint is set forth by President Johnson, who said today:

"In any event, we can afford to wait a dayo r two or a week for an answer andido not believe the petition will be taken to the President before Mr. Winthrop has replied."

Suggestions by the machinists made at their meeting in Naval Lodge Hall last evening that the Navy Department has been "stailing," were heard today by the officials in the Navy Department with little relish, but it is stated that this will have no effect in the ultimate decision.

Wants Information.

"The department will not decide the wage question until it is possessed of dditional information," said Secretary Winthrop this morning," and retary Winthrop this morning," and this information we do not expect to have for two or three days."

This is the same answer that Mr. Winthrop made resterday befort the machinists had threatened to go today to the President. The fact fact that the machinists will appeal to the President if the decision of Mr. Winthrop is adverse does not particularly please the Navy Department men, but it will not influence the decision there.

Machinists in the yard gossiped today to the effect that Mr. Winthrop healtates to order an increase in pay because he does not like to make a finding contrary to that of the Wage Board, which on the first of the year recommended no raise.

Secretary Knox today gave out a statement in which he said that ratification of the arbitration treaties as proposed by Senator Lodge would not involve a surrender by the Senate of any of its constitutional functions. The Secretary said:

"It is a mistake to allege that the resolution of ratification of the peace treaties proposed by Senator Lodge involves a surrender by the Administration of the Senate of any position they hold in respect to the treaties.

"The Senate objection to the third article of the treaties as expressed by the majority report of the Committee on Foreign Relations was that it could be construed to take away the Senate's proposed to take away the Senate's commission has reported tion after the commission has reported to the care to the Department of Commerce and Labor, or some other department of the Partment and the circumstance of the Core of the C

Stephenson Report Is Again Postponed

The Subcommittee of the Privileges and Elections Committee of the Senate, which investigated the Senator Stephen son case, was expected to submit a re port to the main committee today. The committee met, but in the absence of Senators Paynter and Bradley, no re-port was agreed upon. Senator Stephen-son will be exonerated by the report of the subcommittee. Senator Pomerene is expected to make a report of his own but not to hold the charges of corrup-tion proven.

New Grand Jury Indicts Ten Persons

amount of bravery to police certain of the Philippine islands, where the "little brown brothers" were wont to make targets of the American invaders. Examinations were conducted, and past records of the applicants were studied and investigated by experts. Lieutenant Reynolds was given a lieutenancy in the Philippine Scouts, said to be the most picturesque as well as daring set of military policemen in the world.

He sailed for the Philippines after the reputation which he had to get if he hoped to marry the Washington girl he had left behind. They sent him to Moroland, hundreds of miles from the hearest American colony, and with a band of troopers, Lieutenant Reynolds was told to subjugate the unruly natives. After he had been with the Bieros a few months, the commanding officers at Manila decided to let him remain there. "Just the job I want," he replied.

Reports To Department.

Reports To Department.

The War Department began to hear indirectly, of Lieutenant Reynolds' work after the first few months. His weekly reports were brief and to the point. His brother officers were not so silent, however, and it was only a short silent, however, and it was only a short time until the name of the young Washingtonian was known throughout the service. It reached the ears of Miss Macdonald, and last September, when "Jimmie" cabled for her to come to Moroland and meet him, she caught the next steamer.

The newspaper printed at irregular intervals by the soldiers and what few English-speaking civilians there are on the island, a copy of which reached Washington today, contains an account of the wedding, it says:

"The prettiest military wedding ever seen at any military post in this part of the world was solemnized October 12. Miss Annie Banks Macdonald and Lieut. James H. Reynolds, jr., P. S., were married at 8 o'clock by Chaplain Smith, of the Third Infantry. No little romance accompanied the trip from Washington across the continent and the Pacific made alone by Miss Macdonald to meet her future husband.

Military Wedding.

Military Wedding. "The wedding took place at Barrett Hall, which was decorated with paim branches. Directly behind the altar were the regimental colors of the Sixth were the regimental colors of the Sixth Infantry, and the battalion colors of the Second Battalion, Philippine Scouts. Lieutenant Colonel Beacon, of the Sixth Infantry, gave the bride away, and Captain England, of the Twentieth Infantry Band played the wedding march. Following the ceremony, an aisle was formed, twenty officers forming on either side, and the time-honored arch of steel was made, the bridal couple marching under it.

"After a short honeymoon within the bounds of civilisation, the couple will return to Camp Keithley, Regan Barracks, Albany."
